E. Food Stamp Allotment Proration Tables

1. Instructions

The amount of Food Stamps that a household receives each month is determined by subtracting 30 percent of the household's net monthly income from the Thrifty Food Plan amount for the appropriate household size (or by using the Basis of Coupon Issuance Tables which incorporate that calculation). Normally, the household would receive that full monthly allotment throughout its certification period. However, during the initial month, the household is entitled to only a partial allotment. For the first month when a household applies for the Food Stamp Program and for any subsequent application months following a period of non-participation in the program lasting for more than one day, the monthly allotment will be reduced in proportion to the number of days from the date of application until the end of the month. Whether the household receives the full monthly allotment or a prorated amount, its eligibility and allotment are still determined in the usual way - by considering all the income and resources available to the household for the month.

To determine allotments for the initial month using the Food Stamp Allotment Proration Table, read down the left column to the appropriate monthly allotment and across to the date of application. For example, if a household applies on August 20 and is eligible to receive a $35 monthly allotment based on its net monthly income and household size, then the allotment for August would be $12 and the allotment for subsequent months during the certification period would be $35. The table can be used for months with any number of days. If the household is eligible for a $241 monthly allotment, it would receive $24 for the initial month if it applied on February 28 or $0 if it applied on March 31.

Example: If a household which applies on August 20th is eligible to receive a monthly allotment of $425.00, calculate the initial month's allotment:

$$$425.00 \times .3666 = $155.801, \text{ rounded down to } $155.00.$$
